FUTURE PICKS

To: CVM readers Re: Weather Satellite #87
From: Meteorology Dept.

On the weather report today, Comics Values Monthly is about to alert you of impending storms occuring in the comicsphere. Warning: Please be aware of tornadoes, cyclones and other types of turbulence. First, we will take a look at the second tidal wave of new Valiant heroes awaiting to arrive, featuring information on new characters on the horizon including Ninjak and the Armorines. In addition, we go behind the scenes to discover Valiant's newest cloud patterns for 1994.

Next, we see on the radar the giant Hurricane Genesis as three of the Malibu worlds combine into one. CVM reports from the eye of the storm to learn what has caused the union of the worlds of the Dinosaurs For Hire, Ex-Mutants and the Protectors.+

There's lightning striking at Easter Island as seven of comic's finest join their pens and brushes to form Legend. Will they survive in this inclement weather? Read this month's article and find out whether these seven can temper the tempest.

Finally to keep warm while waiting for the sun to shine, we suggest you take a visit to The Words & Pictures Museum, a museum devoted to comic book art in Northampton, Massachusetts.

Now for the CVM forecast for the next three months:

1.) CVM #88 looks at Marvels where important events of the Marvel Universe are viewed through the eyes of innocent bystanders. We also "see" into the future of Daredevil, The Man Without Fear as he turns thirty. As a bonus, we take a visit to the Milestone offices and dig up the foundation on the creators of Hardware, Icon and Milestone's other heroes. Finally, CVM registers at the Joe Kubert School where future comic artists learn their craft.

2.) CVM #89 is our first ever animation issue as we look into two of the hottest cartoons going today, Batman: The Animated Series and X-Men, with the latest news on the theatrical release, Batman: The Animated Movie.

3.) CVM #90 is our '94 "Future Picks" preview issue where we find out everybody's plans for the New Year. This issue also introduces "Writer's Block", a regular department focusing on the art of writing.

Stay tuned to CVM for the most accurate weather reports in the comicsphere.

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Steve "Tornado" Thomas
Meteorologist In Residence

As the seasons change, so does the comic book market. The "summer glut" has moved to fall(ing) prices. A combination of the excess product, late books and tighter purse strings has resulted in prices spiraling downward and nervous speculators throwing coins.

The "heads" side to this coin is that if sales drop on many books, the comics with quality in story (including continuity in the story arcs) and art will surface as the industry leaders. This process of "natural selection" will determine the survival of the comic book species. As a result, "gimmick" covers with prices that match will be among the titles facing a possible "winter of discontent."

But, enough of the fall and winter storm warnings, there are a few vacation spots on the horizon.

Valiant is one of the hardest hit by the storms following the summer glut. However, this is not an indication of a gloomy winter season ahead for one of the youngest major publishers in the field as Valiant plans its second wave with changes promised in the works. Among the anticipated "new blood" is Ninjak #1 featuring work by hot artist Joe Quesada, the reformed and refreshed New Harbingers #26, and X-O Manowar #25/Armorines #0 covering the origin of the Armorines. (For more in-depth information about Valiant and their plans for 1994, check out this month's lead article.)

One other project that should be a big hit is the forthcoming second collaboration between Valiant and Dark Horse: Magnus/Nexus. Mike Baron and Steve Rude, originators of Nexus, will do the creative chores on this one. More on this closer to the release date.

We are now hanging out at The Dark Horse vacation spot in Oregon where they have plans to make your stay a comfortable one. Building on the already successful Aliens books, Dave Gibbons (Give Me Liberty), Mike Mignola (Bram Stoker's Dracula from Topps) and Kevin Nowlan (Vertigo Jam from DC) are doing a 48 page one-shot called Aliens: Salvation. Both Gibbons and Mignola are slated for creator owned projects under the "Legend" banner. Frank Miller is also writing and drawing a sequel to his critically acclaimed Sin City material with Sin City: A Dame to Kill For. (For further info about Legend, take a scan at this month's article.)

Still enjoying the hazy days of summer are the crew at Malibu as they continue to keep their marketing machine rolling into new titles and new talent. Interest in the Ultraverse line is picking up as the titles and stories develop, while the longer running titles in the Malibu universe are being consolidated in the form of "Genesis" in a crossover bringing together Dinosaurs for Hire, Ex-Mutants and the Protectors. (To see how the Malibu worlds were fused in more than seven days, read this month's article.)

Recent announcements at the San Diego Comic Convention added new names to the continually growing Malibu creative talent pool for projects coming out in 1994. Among the talents are: Jim Starlin (whose 'Breed comes out in January); Howard Chaykin (Power & The Glory due in February); Steven Grant and Gil Kane (Edge due in March); Marv Wolfman and Shawn McManus (The Man Called Axe); Walt Simonson (Star Slammers); Peter David and Ernie Colon (Dreadstar); Dan Jurgens (Deuce); Dan Brereton (The Nocturnals); and Norm Breyfogle (Metaphysique).

Malibu is also joining forces with Gold Mountain Entertainment, Inc. and International Strategic Marketing, Inc. to form Rock-It Comix, a fully authorized comics line featuring stories based on and drawn by current stars from the world of music, as well as legendary names from rock 'n roll history. This attempt to bring together both music and comics kicks off in November with two titles: Metallica, based on the heavy metal band; and World Domination, focusing on an independent label's efforts to fight the much larger commercial interests.

Speaking of commercial, DC's hottest commodities, Superman and Batman are expanding their environs with projects both in and outside of comics. In addition to the prime time series on ABC-TV and the recent novelizations of the Death and Life of Superman comes an audio drama from BBC radio also inspired by recent developments in the Man of Steel's life called Superman Lives! reminiscent of the old radio dramas of the 1940's available in the U.S. on December 1.

Meanwhile in Gotham City, the old and new Batmen show no sign of slowing down with a number of Batman projects in the works including the Batman Animated Movie, the Dark Knight looks set for an unbroken run. Among potential fall flashes is the second meeting of the Dark Knight and that uncompromising hero from Mega-City One (and Fleetway Productions) in Batman/Judge Dredd: Vendetta in Gotham. Popular Judgement on Gotham writers John Wagner and Alan Grant are joined by Cam Kennedy (Dark Horse's Star Wars: Dark Empire).

The one-shot brings the grim lawman to Gotham to settle a score with Gotham's finest on this joint DC/Fleetway production. This book also features Batvillains Scarface and the Ventriloquist.

Batman ™ & © 1993 DC Comics
Judge Dredd ™ & © 1993 Fleetway

DC is also slated to release Showcase '94, a new twelve issue maxi-series tightly interwoven in the DC universe. The first issue includes a Batman connection with a Joker story picking up from the Arkham breakout in the "Knightfall" storyline. Top talents James Robinson and Christian Alamy (Lobo's Back) will provide script and art on this one. In addition, Lobo, the main man, who appears in Action Comics #695, will finally receive his own monthly series shipping in November, designed for readers of all ages with no "Suggested for Mature Readers" label.

Suggested for mature readers are: Vertigo's The Children's Crusade, which kicks off in the same month ensuring continued popularity for the Vertigo products; and The Death Gallery, a collection of different artist's interpretation of the cult character, Death, with an introduction by Neil Gaiman. (Last month, CVM had an article on original art in galleries. Four Color Images in Manhattan has a show dedicated to this book in October.)

Finally under the DC banner (sort of), all the Milestone titles are set for the "Shadow War" crossover. The crossover will also introduce two new titles to the Milestone universe, Xombi and Shadow Cabinet. (For further details on this and other Milestone developments, see CVM next month.)

From one Milestone in comics to another. Unfortunately, Marvel has suffered from the storm due to stiff competition from other publishers, but as previously mentioned, good storylines and quality product still survives in the current climate. Marvel's quality entry is Marvels, a selection of painted stories focusing on prominent events in the Marvel universe through the eyes of spectators. The books are written by Kurt Busiek and painted by Alex Ross. Although priced at $5.95, the only enhancement is the uniqueness of the painted material. Next month, CVM will cover this series in detail.

Other noteworthy events in the Marvel Universe include Iron Man #300 introducing new armor for Tony Stark, and a gathering of old friends in various Iron Man armors in a battle against Ultimo, with special guest star War Machine. In addition, the "Siege of Darkness" storyline continues with Part 15 of 17 in Dr. Strange #61 where a twisted version of Doc's costume makes its debut. This is part of a move towards a darker Dr. Strange to fit in with The Midnight Sons' audiences. Lastly from Marvel, Luther Manning returns in Deathlok #25; Jean Grey and Scott Summers are engaged in Uncanny X-Men #308 (leading to a gala wedding); and a ten part Punisher crossover entitled "Suicide Run" that starts in Punisher War Journal #61, and runs through all the Punisher titles. It heralds the return of the "no holds barred" Frank Castle and brings the character into conflict with both the underworld and other Marvel heroes.

Marvel UK offerings include: Death's Head: Gold by Liam Sharp and Andy Lanning, a 64 page quarterly with self-contained stories; and Alan Davis' ClanDestine, a four issue mini by Davis and Mark Farmer, marking the return of Davis to Marvel UK.

The market is responding to the delay in Image titles as comic book prices fall. However, Spawn remains immensely popular due to interesting storylines and consistency with Todd McFarlane's art. McFarlane is overseeing the work of Grant Morrison (story) and Greg Capullo (art) for Spawn #16 through 18 due to his upcoming Batman/Spawn crossover. Details are still not known at press time.

Jim Lee from Homage Studios picks up WildC.A.T.s with #5, following on from the popular mini-series. This also kicks off Homage's first crossover "Killer Interest" with a prologue. The crossover will run through both WildC.A.T.s and Marc Silvestri's Cyberforce.

Bucking the odds of the storm is Defiant which has not had much reaction to date, but interest appears to be increasing. November sees the release of The Good Guys written by Jan Childress with pencils by Grey, and Home for the Holidays, a 64 page Warriors of Plasm graphic novel by Len Wein and Dave Cockrum (the co-creators of the new X-Men). In addition, Chris Claremont is writing the upcoming Prudence & Caution, an unusual buddy book scheduled for release in 1994.

New lines and new publishers are seemingly flavor of the month at present. Worth mentioning are: Harvey's new adventure line, Nemesis Comics featuring Ultraman, and Seaquest, based on the Steven Spielberg/NBC television series; Heretics, the first of a new universe of titles from Iguana Comics; Ogre, a science fiction/fantasy title featuring art by Pete Ayala (Grips) by new publisher Black Diamond Publishing; Bongo Comics' Simpsons Comics and The Itchy and Scratchy Show from the popular television show; and Xenya, a new title from a new publisher, Sanctuary Press, featuring the talents of Tim Hildebrant (of fantasy art fame), Louis Small, Jr. (Vampirella) and William Langley (art director for Spielberg's "An American Tail").

Finally, a quick list of potential picks coming your way. Topps follows up Jurassic Park with Raptor's Attack. Sky Comics goes color with the first of three titles: Seeker: Vengeance; Contender Comics offers up a contemporary crime/action thriller, Gangbusters featuring painted art by Ernie Colon. The Dark sees the light and regains his memory in The Dark #7 from Continuum. Finally, Dark Visions Publishing's second release, Alphabet, spinning off from their initial anthology title.

See who survives the fall and winter storm, next month...

Corrections

In Comics Values Monthly #85, Lisa Patrick, assistant editor of the X-Men was accidentally misquoted in the "X-Men/Avengers" article. In addition to apologizing for the error, CVM will reprint the quote and its preceding paragraph in its entirety with the misquote corrected from page 13 of issue #85:

Historically, both titles (X-Men and Avengers) have always fluctuated with different creative teams, especially on the best selling X-Men, where the creators usually attain collectible superstar status and then leave, like Rob Liefeld and Jim Lee. Despite that, the books go on.

"What we've found thus far is that our sales haven't been affected," said (Lisa) Patrick, "because it's a different world out there. I think readers are really interested in these characters, and they really love these characters. As long as we've got people working on them who care about them, then you're going to have a quality product. That's what we strive to do, to maintain the quality, keep the tradition going, because it's been so many years of creative teams. It's certainly large shoes to fill, but we do our best."

In addition, Comics Values Monthly would like to thank Jeffrey Lindenblatt of JAL Publications which publishes The Missing Years, a magazine devoted to newspaper strips like Dick Tracy and Terry & The Pirates and Jamie Riehle from Kitchen Sink Publications for the aid on the sidebar, "The World's Finest Newspaper Strips" that appeared last month.

Valiant Sails Into '94

by William A. Christensen and Mark Seifert

Valiant Comics has probably had more influence on the comics industry than any publisher since the 1970's. Within two years, they have gone from the new kid on the block to a major contender in the field. They are always in the news with their hot new properties, and the end of 1993 and beginning of 1994 look like no exception.

Valiant Yearbooks

The first Valiant Yearbook will be released in September of this year. Although in some respects, yearbooks are Valiant's answer to other companies annuals, the difference between Valiant's Yearbooks and the other annuals is more than just a name change. Valiant's Yearbooks will be stand-alone, full length stories by top flight creators. Eternal Warrior Yearbook #1 features a creative team from down under in Australia - Dave DeVries and Glenn Lumsden. Valiant was so pleased with the work this pair turned in that they've already signed them for an as yet unannounced Yearbook in mid-1994. Magnus Yearbook #1 will be coming out in early 1994 with the creative team of Mike Baron and Paul Smith. The story will be a lost Magnus tale that takes place in Valiant continuity pre-Magnus #1. Other Yearbooks in the works for mid-1994 include an X-O Yearbook by Joe Quesada.

Ninjak ™&© 1993 Voyager Communications

September also marks the release of the long-awaited Rai trade paperback that reprints the hard-to-find first four issues and the important Rai #0. (For those not in the know, Rai #0 presented the timeline of the Valiant Universe which included the deaths of major characters in the comic continuities currently running like Shadowman and Archer.) The Rai #0 Companion #1 will be included with the first printings of the trade paperback. Additional Rai #0 Companions will then be published sporadically, expanding on the events chronicled in Rai #0.

Ninjak

While some companies seem ready to settle in for a long winter's nap during the cold months, Valiant seems determined to turn things up a notch. Ninjak is Valiant's big new series for November. With pencils by Joe Quesada, inks by Jimmy Palmiotti and story by Mark Moretti, Ninjak promises to be the hottest Valiant title yet. Ninjak #1 also sports another amazing chromium cover by Joe Quesada. According to senior Valiant Vice President Jon Hartz, the character is, "sort of a James Bond kind of approach to a comic. Ninjak is the consumate professional. He never makes a mistake. He knows exactly when he goes into a situation, exactly what is going to happen and, any plans for all the contingencies." Ninjak is different from other characters.

"He is really a loner," Hartz explained. "His purpose in life is to combat a crime organization that we haven't really shown very much in the Valiant universe yet, called Webnet. They are sort of more progressive criminals in that they don't put on masks and go out and rob people or do drugs - what they do is they steal information through computers. What they have done is that they have a criminal computer network where they are able to crack into people's businesses and transfer money and dig up information and what have you. It is run by a fellow by the name of Dr. Silk. Dr. Silk is really unique. We think he is going to be our next big villain in the Valiant Universe." (Speaking of villains, one who has made very little noise since his debut in H.A.R.D.Corps #11 - called the Otherman - is set to become a major villain over the next year.)

The Armorines

X-O Monowar #25, also in November, will introduce the Armorines in an separate bound-in comic called Armorines #0. "In the X-0 storyline that has been running for the last few months," Hartz revealed, "the goverment has become aware of Aric and they are worried about the power that his suit has so what they have done is compiled technology to combat the X-0 armor. They have put together almost like a [Navy] Seal team of soldiers who are calling themselves the Armorines. They were created by the government using the latest technology to date, so they are quite inferior to the X-O Manowar armor yet they are probably one of the most powerful weapons that the government has come up with to date."

Will this result in a regular Armorines Series?

"As of right now," Hartz said, "we don't have a regular monthly series planned for Armorines but the way that Bob Layton is thinking about it right now is that about every three to four months we will do another insert inside of X-O, so Armorines #0 will be in X-O Manowar #25 and somewhere around X-O Manowar #28 through #29 we will do an Armorines #1 insert. This way, in a sense, we have another regular-type series, but it won't be a whole other comic book that people will have to buy every month or two unless we get a real strong response that people want to see it on a monthly basis. [Nevertheless,] we will do it from time to time and probably keep it in X-0 because that is where the characters came out of."

Armorines ™&© 1993 Voyager Communications

Harbinger

Valiant will be giving Harbinger a new direction during another big push in November. Beginning in Harbinger #26, Sean Chen moves over from Rai to take over art chores on the title. The book will receive an almost completely different cast of characters, and will focus more on the Harbinger Foundation itself. Issue #26 will start to pick up the pieces left behind by the havoc created in Harbinger #25.

Bloodshot

December also promises to be an exciting month from Valiant. Bloodshot #0 will be one of the many big releases for December. It features a chromium Joe Quesada cover and is written and drawn by Kevin Van Hook with inks by Dick Giordano.

"Joe just came in last week," said Hartz, "with a killer cover. Joe is really having fun designing this stuff - he is one of the few artists out there that understands how to use the chromium process. So he has requested that we do the Bloodshot #0 in chromium as well as Ninjak #1."

Magnus/Nexus

The anxiously awaited Magnus/Nexus crossover is another big project shipping from Valiant in December. The original creative team behind Dark Horse's Nexus, Mike Baron and Steve Rude, is reunited for this two issue series. This project, which marks the second time the two publishers have collaborated, will be under Valiant's control. (Last year's Predator/Magnus was done under Dark Horse's control.)

Commenting on Rude's work, Hartz said, "What he has done to Russ Manning is what he did to Jack Kirby in the Mr. Miracle Special he did a number of years ago, where he went right back to the source and drew his inspiration from the source. When he did it with Mr. Miracle, it was Jack Kirby. This time it is Russ Manning, so he has really gone back and researched it. The stuff is terrific; it just looks gorgeous!"

This series will have cardstock covers and a retail price of $2.95 an issue.

The December issue of Magnus will directly lead into Time Walker, the next new regular Valiant title. This title will focus on Ivar, the brother of Armstrong and the Eternal Warrior. Jon Hartz will write this story with pencils by Mike Leeke. The storyline will focus on Ivar time traveling to important events in the Valiant universe. Future stories include Ivar dealing with Kaleb, Eternal Warrior's son, and Ivar's adventure on the moon during Bloodshot's fatal fight with Axe (which was related in Rai #0). Many of the loose ends begun in past Valiant stories will be cleared up in this new monthly series. The readers will finally see what happened on Earth during Unity when all the heroes disappeared. It so happens that Ivar, H.A.R.D.Corps, and Harada were all very busy during that time.

Timewalker ™&© 1993 Voyager Communications

Shadowman #0 will ring in the new year in January 1994. This book promises to give readers far more insight into the true nature of Shadowman. The book's creator Bob Hall said that this book will primarily deal with the Shadowman of the 1800's. To help new readers get the full story, a Shadowman trade paperback will be released at the same time.

Turok will see some changes with the team of Tim Truman and Rags Morales possibly taking over on a continuing basis starting in early 1994. Tim Truman is currently doing a story arc which he will be both writing and penciling. Also upcoming is a story arc by Gonzalo Mayo and Howard Simpson.

Valiant plans to continue producing trade paperbacks slowly until they have all of their pre-Unity books reprinted by the end of 1994. Valiant also plans on–keeping the older trade paperback's in print as well so that any reader will be able to get all of the early Valiant stories.

As we look ahead into the summer of 1994, the big project is the Malev War Culmination. This major story will affect Rai and Magnus, both of which are set in the future of the Valiant Universe. Currently, the Malev war has been raging in these two titles since Magnus #21 and Rai #9. David Ross will be taking over Rai in January and will start accelerating the story to the conclusion of the Malev War. The Malev War concludes during the summer and some major changes will come about as a result. Characters introduced in the storyline will spin off into their own series and the Rai and Magnus series will have some lasting alterations.

"People are going to be shocked", said Hartz, "because in Magnus and Rai we are going to kill off a bunch more people, so the world is going to be a whole different place come next summer. We want to keep everybody on their toes with this stuff and with a war, sometimes it ends up okay, and sometimes it ends up tragically. Tragically is what is going to happen."

1994 will also see the final addition of a title in the current Valiant universe. Hartz says, "I believe Ninjak is our fourteenth title. Time Walker will be our fifteenth title. Armorines may or may not be the sixteenth and then like I said we will finish up with a seventeenth title sometime late summer or early fall. That is all we have proposed right now - there may be one to two other titles or if we come up with a great idea we may go ahead and do more, so I never say "never". In terms of what Bob [Layton], Kevin [Van Hook] and myself have been planning all along that will be the last of what we have planned to do so far."

With one major hit from Upper Deck already out, Valiant cards will soon be better than ever. Valiant is doing a superpremium card set with fully painted cards. The as yet unnamed card set will feature art done by Dave Dorman with chase cards from Steve Rude. The Valiant apparel line will continue in mid-1994. The current line will stay available clear through Christmas.In the summer of 1994 Valiant plans to do more shirts based on the sell-through of the first batch. Other merchandising possibilities include toys, animated cartoons, and movies. However there will be no rush on these.

On a final note, Hartz said, "I want it to be the way we want it to be and we will wait until we find the right kind of partners to accomplish that goal."

GENESIS:

Ex-Mutants • Dinosaurs For Hire • Protectors

by Phillip Mateer

As summer begins to fade into autumn comics fans are looking back at all the books and new universes created and published and starting to sort out the winner and the losers.

One winner seems to be Malibu Comics, whose Ultraverse titles sold well "beyond our expectations," according to Malibu Creative Director Tom Mason and was well received by critics and retailers. That, along with the success of Star Trek: Deep Space Nine was enough to make Malibu the summer's fifth largest comic publisher, according to August figures from Capital City Distribution (Marvel, DC, Image and Valiant had the top four slots).In a summer when the word "glut" came up frequently, and where most other publishers had to worry about shrinking market shares, Malibu managed an increase.

Now with summer almost over, the company is making a move to increase sales and reader interest in some of its non-Ultraverse titles, with a shake-up-the-books crossover called "Genesis."

The Genesis of "Genesis"

The crossover, a kind of "Crisis on Malibu Earths," involves the overlapping of three now-separate comics worlds into one. Two of the comics, Dinosaurs For Hire and Ex-Mutants (each of which have been around for over six years) will be merged into Malibu's "Protectorverse," which includes its superhero group title Protectors and its spin-offs The Ferret, Man of War, and Gravestone.

Malibu's comics currently divide into three lines – the titles involved In "Genesis," the Ultraverse titles, and the Eternity imprint titles (like Captain Harlock, Ninja High School and the Robotech books.)

Roland Mann, editor of the Protectors/Dinosaurs For Hire/Ex-Mutants titles, sees their books merging into one coherent world as a logical next step.

"All three books have been fairly successful," Mann explained, "but now we can't have the characters crossover into each others' books without coming up with some artificial plot device, and those can get old so it made more sense to put the characters into the same world permanently. The fans would have more fun, and we would too. That's how the idea for "Genesis" came about."

"The evolution of Genesis gives Malibu two complete, cohesive and continually expanding universes," Mason said, "and I now have a wide assortment of new characters and situations to play with. This is going to be a lot of fun."

Crossover Goodies

The "Genesis" storyline will involve six main chapters, in the September and October issues of the three main titles (Dinosaurs For Hire, Ex-Mutants, and The Protectors). In addition, the Protectors-related titles like The Ferret, Gravestone, and Man Of War will also feature self-contained parts of the main storyline.

Malibu is also providing the kinds of extras that crossover fans have come to expect. Each main chapter of the "Genesis" storyline will be bagged, and will contain a Skycap giveaway featuring one of the main characters. The company is also producing Genesis #0, a $3.50 book with a Holographic foil cover enhancement by George Perez, and four eight-page stories: Dinosaurs For Hire in a Fantastic Four parody drawn by Curt Swan, Protectors with Rich Buckler art, an Ex-Mutants story, and the debut of a new character, Widowmaker, who will eventually be getting his own title.

All of this, of course, begs a question: Does the comic market really need another crossover, after the number of books published this summer?

"Summer might have burned out a lot of fans," admitted Mason, "but these are well written, good stories, not just flashy marketing tools, We think the fans will appreciate them. "We hear from retailers that they're selling out of the Protectorverse titles now," Mann says, "so we're hoping they'll take a deep breath and,order a few more of each, once they realize that they're good and they're selling well."

The Ex-Ex Mutants

Of all the affected titles, Ex-Mutants will be undergoing the most changes during "Genesis" – little things, like the conquering and destruction of its entire universe, the death of one of the group, and a permanent move of the characters into the Earth of the Protectors. The title began in 1986, with its storyline a kind of half-twist on comics' obsession with X-titles and mutants. (The main characters live in a near-future world where everybody is a mutant, but they've become perfectly "normal.")

Added to the mix, in the September Ex-Mutants #11, Mann and artists Thomas Derenick and Mike Miller introduce the alien conqueror Extreme to the Ex-Mutants' universe. "Basically," Mann says, "he comes in, kicks ass, and takes names. He makes mincemeat out of the Ex-Mutants." One dies, and their base of operations, Sluggtown, is mostly destroyed. Then Extreme, having worked up an appetite for even newer worlds to conquer, uses a dimensional scanning device to spot the universe containing the Protectors' version of earth.

By the end of Genesis, the Ex-Mutants will not only have seen a member die and be permanently a part of the Protectors' world, but will also have a few members leave to join the Protectors, have a few Protectors leave to join them, and will have gained super-powers (the Ex-Ex-Mutants? The second Ex-Mutants?) The title's creative team is also changing after #11 and 12, the new regular team will feature scripts by Charles Marshall and art by Patrick Rolo.

Three Dinos Sore

You can't accuse Malibu (or Dinosaurs For Hire creator Tom Mason) of jumping on the Jurassic Park bandwagon, Mason created the Dinos in the 1980s, with the original first issue appearing in 1987. The title ran nine issues then disappeared, only to be resurrected last year as a new part of the Malibu lineup.

Mason crafts the Dinos as pure parody, breaking the "fourth wall" at will and including dozens of in-joke references to comics industry personnel and events in his scripts. Describing where he gets ideas for the book, Mason said "I just go through the fan magazines and ask: who's doing what stupid thing this month? The Dinos are a blast to write."

They're apparently a blast to draw, too - something about the concept of wisecracking mercenary dinosaurs with bad attitudes and big guns brings out the best in artists. In addition to the Curt Swan story in Genesis #0 the September issue of Dinosaurs For Hire #8 will feature a cover and backup story by Joe Staton, and issue #9 will have a Swan cover.

The concept is apparently attractive to others too. There will be a Sega video game version of the Dinos out (hopefully) in October. Mason said, "The game, with a blast-'em-all-type-plot, was originally scheduled to come out last spring. [The prototype] tested so well that Sega decided to modify it,and give it a bigger push, which led to the delay."

Another Dinos project, an animated

Extreme and Ferret ™&© 1993 Malibu Ent. Group

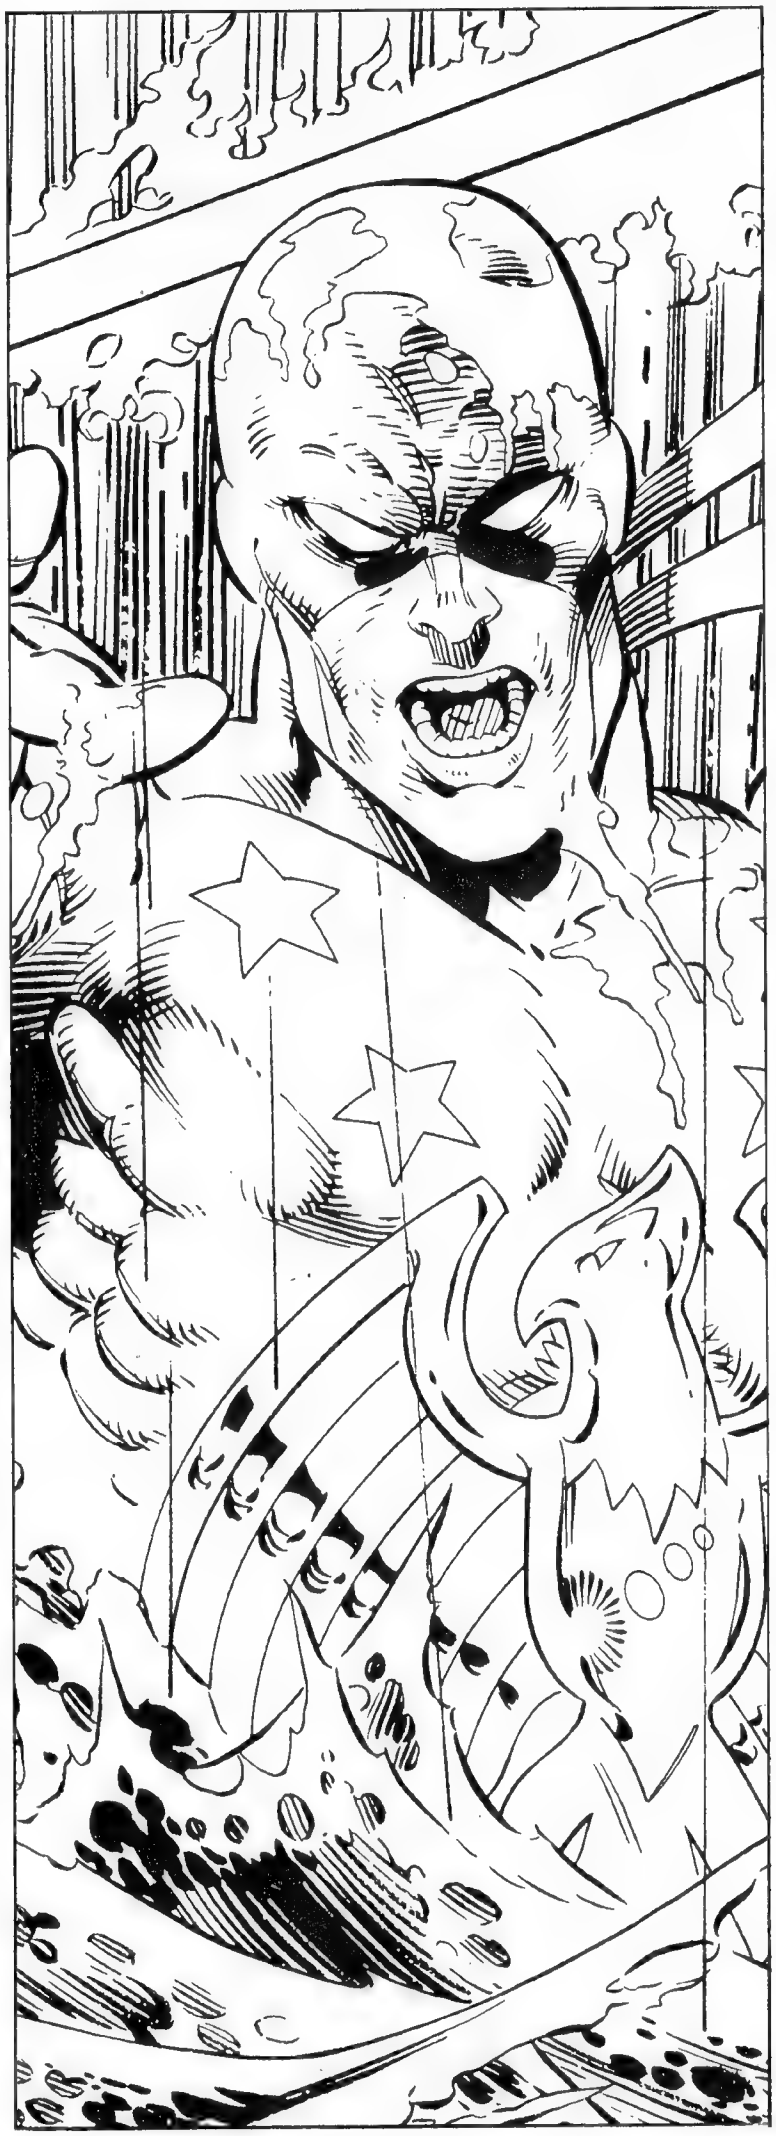
series, is currently on hold, although according to Mason, it's been in development for four years. "First," said Mason, "it was going to be live action, then claymation, then Saturday morning animation, then it stopped. Then Fox, who has the option, got all excited about Jurassic Park, and for six months there was a lot of talking and everybody was pumped up. Now, for two months, we've heard nothing,"

Since the Dinos are flexible kinds of lizards, bringing them into the Protectorverse isn't proving too hard. Mason accomplishes it by killing them. Then, in the process of fighting their way back from the underworld they link up with Gravestone, a member of the Protectors and another sort-of-dead guy, and follow him back to the Protectors' world in time to run into Extreme, who's arrived to do a little looting and pillaging.

To Serve and To Protect - um, except for L.A.

The Protectors and their related titles are the mainstay of the non-Ultraverse Malibu line, which is why the other titles are collapsing into their dimension. However, that doesn't mean that the world of the Protectors will get off without damage: for starters, Extreme will be transferring the Ex-Mutants' base of Sluggtown to Los Angeles, destroying the city in the process (along with DC's version of L.A., Coast City, being blasted into nothing in the Superman titles, this has not been a good year for the City of Angels). The Protectors naturally, will be blamed for the mess, which means that even after (if?) they defeat Extreme, they'll have some heavy explaining to do.

In addition, with Protectors as the main title and three spin-off titles (soon to be four, with the addition of Widowmaker), the Protectorverse should have enough characters and plotlines to keep itself busy for some time. "The fans will not be disappointed," said Mann, who's already dealing with plots for this winter. "With the Protectors blamed for destroying LA, the government will be replacing Man of War as team leader with a new character. Some members will leave; others will be very upset -- but the fans won't be disappointed."



Man of War ™&© 1993 Malibu Ent. Group

Mason agrees that the energy generated by combining so many characters will help all of the titles, and adds that advance orders from dealers have been encouraging. He sees the "breakout" character of the supergroup as being the Ferret, whose own book has shown good sales figures. "He's the antagonist within the group," said Mason," and those are always the most fun to write. He gets the best dialogue, too."

Not to be outdone by Dinosaurs For Hire merchandising, the Protectors will also be involved in a line of toy weapons from TCA. According to Mann, there will be four: a hand-held crossbow, already used in the comics by The Arrow; a slingshot; a wrist rocket launcher (used in the books by a new character, Midnite Blue); and a pistol (used in the books by the new character Widowmaker). Mann said that the Malibu staff has seen prototypes of the toys already, and that they're expected to be out by Christmas. All the merchandising, "chase" books, cover gimmicks and giveaways in the world won't help unless fans like the books. What will make Malibu's new Protectorverse titles stand out from the nearly 800 titles currently clogging the comic racks? Both Mann and Mason agreed that it's a good story that will keep readers coming back for more.

"Without pointing fingers," Mann says, "a lot or books put the big emphasis on art. They're good-looking books, but when you try to read them there's nothing there. We want Malibu to be different -- we want great art too, but when someone closes the back cover of one of our books, we want them to be able to say, 'That was a good read. That was fun.'"

Mason, when asked what makes the Malibu titles stand out, also used the phrases "a good read" and "fun," but is careful to distinguish what he means by "fun not necessarily a funny book", but a fun one -- a thrill-a-minute book, with good characters and a plot that brings you back for more. "We aim for comics you can read instead of just collecting and storing on a shelf. If they finish the book and are happy, and eager to see what's coming next, then I think we've done our jobs."

For a comic company based in California, with a name like "Malibu", that emphasis on fun seems natural. It's paid off between the Ultraverse and the Protectorverse. Now, the waves are breaking Malibu's way, and the surf should be up for a long time to come.

Henry Rice

Dear Brian,

I have been collecting comics for about ten years now, and I buy CVM every month because I like to read the articles by your great staff. I also have a question I'd like answered: I just found out that I should not open the sealed bags that some comics come in. According to CVM, the prices are higher when they are still sealed, but according to my dealer the bags will destroy the comic inside. I have them in bags and backing boards. What should I do?

Andrew Mencher
Brooklyn, NY

Dear Andrew,

According to CVM Editor Smilin' Steve Thomas, his pricing people are, at this very moment, gathering information so he can formulate the definitive pricing policy on bagged vs. unbagged comics.

However, in my own not-so-humble opinion: do absolutely nothing Andrew, you're already doing the right thing. The only reason to keep a comic in those ridiculous bags is if you are a short term speculator, looking to turn a quick buck on a comic book. In the short term, you can resell a hot comic for more money if it's still in the bag; in the long term, the bags will stick to your comics and ruin them. Read your comics, take them out of the bag (save the bag, so the comic is "complete") and bag and board the books yourselves. You'll get more enjoyment out of the books, and they'll be more valuable ten years down the road than if you kept them in the cheapo bags the publishers use.

As our friend Keith Giffen says, "Shag the Bag!"

Out of the Bag Brian

Dear Brian,

I must express how very angry I felt when I found out that the Plasm #0 (which I feel was an intentional rip-off) was sold out on the very day of its release. I then learned that every store in my area had only received two binders! Two binders! Then I heard that Jim Shooter said, "I didn't think that the demand would be that great."

Yeah, right! Is there anyone out there collecting comics who hasn't heard of Jim Shooter? All anyone could talk about around here was Jim's return to comics by starting Defiant! My friends and I couldn't wait to pick up the cards and binder. To put it simply, he used a very original idea to rip off consumers. Two days after the sellout, my comic dealer says that there will be second printings!

Oh, great! Thanks, Jim, but with the first print going for around ninety bucks (and up) around here, it kind of makes a second print worthless. Still, I guess in a new comic world of more gimmicks and less quality this fits right in!

John McCue

Frank G. Lloyd, Jr. Richwood, WV
Winner of the Gold Venom

Dear John,

When I got your letter, John, I did my best Perry White Stop-The-Presses-Thing, and I got the Defiant guys on the horn. They responded immediately; I hope their answer satisfies your concerns.

Talkin' to the Big Guys Bri

Dear John,

It's my job to hear complaints as well as accolades, so I appreciate your candor. On Jim Shooter's behalf, I want to address your concerns and clear up any misunderstandings, especially since Jim really does care very much about fans like you. He truly does want Defiant to be a reader-conscious, reader-friendly comic company. We feel very badly that you, or any of our fans, feel let down or manipulated because of the Plasm #0 album situation.

Please understand that the cards and binders are produced by The River Group, a licensee of Defiant. While Defiant is responsible for the art and editorial content of these items, the actual marketing, manufacturing, pricing, and sales of the cards and binders are The River Group's responsibility.

Ironically, we originally weren't going to make any binders at all, but then Jim decided a binder to arrange the cards in would be a nice little extra. Contrary to what you believe, when we started this project, we truly had no idea how popular the binders would be. Historically, no binder had ever sold more than 12,000 copies, therefore The River Group felt safe with the 15,000 figure they announced in the trades. They didn't count on retailers ordering twice as many binders as they needed upon reading about the limited printing, in the event of allocations. Those retailers ended up with the amount they really wanted. Unfortunately, this meant the store owners who only ordered the exact amount they needed were unfairly left out in the cold, as happened with the stores in your area.

The River Group felt obliged to honor the number they'd announced, however. As a way to supply the demand, they created the second edition. Some people like yourself are, understandedly, not happy about this solution – but more than 40,000 people are, as that is approximately what the orders for the second edition were. We don't blame you for feeling cynical, John, but we promise that in the future any Defiant binders will be printed to order. We'll see to it that there is never a shortage or allocation problem again!

Sorry we can't do more at the moment to help correct these problems. If it's any consolation we (and The River Group) have learned from this experience, and we'll make sure these problems don't crop up in future Defiant products. If you'd like to talk with someone at The River Group, call Lisa Barrieau at (203)454-4548, or write to them at 25 Ford Road, Westport CT 06880.

Thanks for making your feelings known to us, John. We hope to hear from again soon for more upbeat reasons!

J.Clark Smith
Defiant Sales/Marketing Manager

Dear Brian,

I have information for you, which would indicate that you are not entirely correct about some rock and roll/comic trivia.

Marvel Comics Super Special #1, featuring Kiss, was in fact printed with Gene, Peter, Ace and Paul's blood mixed in the red ink! Photos were included in the mag of the actual bloodletting!

Sixty million years from now, some scientist will find the magazine and using the DNA on the preserved printed page recreate the original members of Kiss thus creating a true Rock and Roll Utopia.

Dear Mister H,

I've seen the pictures. Don't believe the hype. What would they call this Utopia? Geriatric Park? Would they play Jurassic Rock?

Dear Michael,

No, I'm horribly scarred about the face.

Ugly Guy Bri

Dear Brian, Scott, and the CVM crew,

Wake up to the real prices comics are selling for! Either give collectors real info, or let some other magazine. You are so far out of touch collectors laugh at CVM. There is little demand for low quality books; it's time to reflect that.

Your Enemies,
Comic Syndicate

Dear Comic Syndicate,

Who the hell is Scott? And why do you continue to send me messages on ripped up pieces of cardboard lettered in crayon?

We feel that we do the most intensive market research in the industry, and we have the most accurate pricing bar none. Our prices are compiled through our dealer networks, pricing reports, phone interviews, show prices, auction prices realized, input from fans and publishers, current hot artists, writers and characters and our knowledge of industry trends. These numbers are adjusted for regional differences, and then synthesized into a value. How do you get your prices?

If you're really serious about your complaints regarding our pricing structure, why don't you meet me at the next big convention and we'll discuss in detail your opinions. We feel that we put more time into pricing and listings than anybody else in this industry and we're always looking for more input. We don't deal in glitz or gimmicks; there are other magazines out there doing a better job of that than we care to. Our stock in trade is the most comprehensive up-to-date listings and values in the business, and nobody does it better than we do. If you have valid concerns about our pricing we'll definitely take into consideration any information you care to present to us.

Reasonable Guy Bri

P.S.: If you don't stop sending me anonymous notes I'm going to have to track you down and kill you. You'd never survive my chicken rondelet kick.

Attention C.V.Artists

Several letters have come my way regarding how to go about registering a copyright on comic book characters created by an artist. So, I called up the Copyright Office in Washington DC and was promptly sent an information pack. The Copyright Office said, "Published or unpublished cartoon drawings or comic strips are registrable as pictorial works on Form VA. In no case does copyright protection extend to the title of the work or the names of the characters....there is no way to copyright the general idea for the characters..."

The form you need to ask for to register a character is Form VA; ask for Circular 44 (Cartoons and Comic Strips) for all the information you need. The number to call for this stuff is 1(202)707-3000. They sent me all the forms and information in three days! Good Luck!

Retailers From Across America, Canada and Abroad Report on the State of the Market in Their Region

DC Batman and Superman. Superman and Batman. God, we love DC. These two characters are hotter than we have ever seen, including the halcyon days of the Batman movie. DC came up with the best way to get people to care about these two by getting rid of them. Flash has also gained some speed thanks to the return of "Barry Allen".

MARVEL Most of Marvel is dead. Venom and Sabretooth have been strong sellers, but we hear constant complaints from customers that Marvel is turning these two into good guys. The X-books sell well because of the name, but people are noticing that these muties aren't Chris Claremont's X-Men. Proof of this was the return of Betsy Braddock's body - Claremont clearly stated that Psylocke was in her original, altered body. The X-Books were built on 15 years of continuity and stable characterization; this is a warning and so are the low sales.

OTHER PUBLISHERS Image is tops in our store, consistently selling out. If someone wants the latest issue of Spawn, they better come in the day it comes out to get it. This book is the hottest book out on the market. Valiant is dying and the market for back issues is ready to fall. Marvel is the home of gimmick covers, and Valiant is the home for gimmick first appearances. People are tired of being told they have to buy every Valiant book because that guy in the back corner of a panel playing the saxophone might be a hot character. Dark Horse has not been a very big success with Comics' Greatest World; however Steel Harbor and Vortex look much better than the previous issues and should do well. Two words to describe Aliens vs Predator, beautiful and hot. This is going to be a great series! Malibu is doing well with the Ultraverse. Watch for Mantra to be the sleeper hit out of the Ultraverse.

DC Batman and Superman are big sellers for DC, also the Vertigo titles. Hawkman, Catwoman, and the Spectre show promise to be good sellers also.

MARVEL Ren and Stimpy does well but that is about it. Hellstorm and Thunderstrike are enjoyable, and the X-titles are picking up steam with the return of Magneto.

OTHER PUBLISHERS Image is dropping 25% because of the poor storylines. Valiant continues to be strong with recent first appearance issues selling well. Continuity and Topps have had poor sales, while Dark Horse, Malibu, and Defiant did very well.

DC I have been getting dozens of calls a day asking if Batman #500 has come in, so I hope it lives up to all of the hype. Why was there such a special cover for Flash #80? DC Universe:Trinity is a decent story, but the timing is off. The "Bloodlines" annuals are good, but they should have had a few more aliens so that more of the books could have had endings.

MARVEL My biggest concern with Marvel is that they have one artist working on a whole bunch of books that used to have all the big names. For the first time in memory, Marvel is more late than DC. The whole Magneto #0 fiasco is very upsetting. The amount of Magneto

#0 books you get is based on the lowest of the five X-titles, and the exact number issued has changed three times. We'll end up with not enough Magneto #0's and far too many back issues of some X books. Sabretooth and Deadpool have sold well, and the upcoming Gambit series is sure to be a hit. Why are there still so many UK books?

OTHER PUBLISHERS The Image "implosion" might backfire. Some people are mad that their favorite titles didn't make the cut. Valiant is still consistent, but some people are dropping them to pick up the Ultraverse books. Deathmate is as good as advertised, but the $4.95 price tag has scared many kids away. Dark Horse $1.00 books have lost their momentum and not many people signed up for Vortex at $2. Aliens/Predator is a book that should come out every two weeks to keep its audience enthused. Defiant hooked some of its readers with Warriors of Plasm, but I'm not sure how many are readers and how many just want to be on the next "Valiant."

DC Batman, Batman, Batman! Old issues of Detective, Shadow of the Bat, and Legends of the Dark Knight are going like crazy. Higher dollar Bat books are slower movers but still steady. The Blue Boy Scout's titles are doing big sales volume as well. However, Superman back issue (pre-John Byrne) sales are non-existent. With the recent increase in price of old DC horror, many people pick up the Vertigo titles in the hope that the market will repeat itself. Hawkman sales were strong, though it will be hard to tell if DC can make this character click as big as Superman or Batman. "Trinity" has kept people coming back for more causing sales on those books to also go up.

MARVEL Marvel's coupons for the 2099 bible were poorly advertised. If Marvel really wanted to promote their 2099 line, they would have put something on the cover. Look at any Silver Age Marvel book! Also how many books can be made with Death's Head II? Sure.. he's a great character, but nowhere near as big as Spider-Man or Wolverine.

OTHER PUBLISHERS Dark Horse Comics dollar books are just like the old time serials. Image and Valiant are climbing in sales to new readers and with school starting many new people will join the Image and Valiant club. Warriors Of Plasm is written and drawn well, but Jim Shooter has hurt himself within comic buying crowds by shorting dealers their Plasm #0 binders. However, many people enjoy Jim Shooter and don't care.

DC "Knightfall" back issues have been outselling Superman ten to one; this has helped Catwoman sales. Next best seller is Spectre, with some back issue movement. Nothing else sells well; Vertigo sells some, but most sell in the University district. Milestone sells zero. Hey, I tried. DC needs to get more comics aimed at kids, as very few buy any except for Batman and Superman titles.

MARVEL Sales are picking up! Sabretooth sells best with the X-Men and Ren and Stimpy tied for second. Venom:Funeral Pyre sold one fifth of the limited series. Ghost Rider, Fantastic Four, and Daredevil sales are increasing. Deadpool sold moderately, while 2099 continues to sell well. Wolverine is also selling better.

OTHER PUBLISHERS Image and Valiant sales are down. We sold twice as many Deathmate prologue's as yellow or blue, due to the higher prices of these books. X-O Manowar is my best seller with #0 and #21 flying off the shelves. Shadowman is excellent; this is the Valiant title with the best story and art. Pitt #2 sold well also. Other good sellers are Shadowhawk, WildC.A.T.S., Jurassic Park, and Warriors of Plasm. The Ultraverse is taking off with all issues selling out but with no re-orders coming in.

DC Superman, Batman, and Vertigo have powered this company into our number one seller. Jonah Hex:Two Gun Mojo has become a major seller. We have repeatedly reordered not only "Knightfall" books but Batman Vs. Grendel, Legends of Dark Knight #50, and Catwoman. The "Reign of Supermen" books have brought us an army of new readers. Both the "Trinity" and the "Bloodlines" crossovers have also sold well.

MARVEL This is the loser in the "Summer of Glut". The mainstream Marvels are not standing up to the new competition. Every single title Marvel publishes is down in sales at our store. The biggest loser are the Punisher books, Namor, Midnight Sons titles, Cage, Nomad, and Sleepwalker. Marvel UK and Epic's Heavy Hitters are going nowhere. One bright spot is that the Razorline books are very popular and selling very well.

OTHER PUBLISHERS Both Malibu and Dark Horse have successfully launched their new lines. The Ultraverse titles, especially Prime and Mantra, are hits. High marks to Malibu for producing a line of very professional books. Writing and plotting are very strong, with many original slants on old superhero situations. Dark Horse's low price and high production value brought many readers to Comics Greatest World. X and Ghost are the most popular so far. The old standbys, Alien/Predator, both turned in good sales, together and solo. Image and Valiant have both slipped in sales as "speculators" have left, leaving a core fan group behind. Defiant had a strong start, fueled by the same people who used to buy one hundred copies of Valiant number ones. A bad taste was left by Plasm #0, as customers found it was impossible to get a complete set of cards from one box. Dead in the water are Topps and Continuity. Both are being bought only by the hard core card collectors. Comic fans turn thumbs down on both of them.

DC Surprise, surprise. A new artist on Wonder Woman and the book sold out immediately. All "Knightfall" and Azrael appearances are sold out. All Vertigo sales are marginal. A tip to DC; sometimes less is more.

MARVEL With every new month, Marvel bring tons of new titles. But for each of the new titles, an old series will die. We have got many new readers on Daredevil and the Avengers.

OTHER PUBLISHERS There has been a decline on Rai, Secret Weapons, and Bloodshot. But there has been an increase on X-O, Shadowman, Harbinger, and Magnus. The first week of Comics Greatest World was a big success for us here. Back issues sell very hot and seem to be getting hotter all the time.

WHEN WORDS AND PICTURES COLLIDE

by Neil Hansen

Where does a two dimensional character go to turn from a hero on newsprint into a piece of fine art? One place where this can occur is The Words & Pictures Museum of Sequential Art.

The Words & Pictures Museum of Sequential Art opened its doors to an unsuspecting public on October 13, 1992. Founded by Kevin Eastman, co-creator of the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, the Words & Pictures Museum is the second museum in the United States to focus on comics presented as fine art. The museum is located in Northampton, Massachusetts, housed in the Roundhouse, which was originally built as a gasworks back in 1856, but has now been completely renovated to historic preservation standards by Museum Services, Inc. of Gainesville, Florida, which also designed, fabricated and installed the exhibitry.

"It was in the actual planning stages for two years," said Fiona Russell, assistant director of the Words & Pictures Museum. "I think Kevin had actually conceived of the idea [for] quite a while."

Russell said the purpose behind the museum was "to try and elevate the status of comic books in the United States, the thought being that if someone was to list a number of different art forms that they were familiar with, they would not mention comic art because it's usually not considered an art form – something we're trying to change attitudes about. Take some of the skeptics and cynics that come in here [to the museum] frowning on comic art, and give them a better appreciation, and present it in a fine art setting as well as a fun setting. Then, you can make a choice. You either liked it or disliked it, but you considered it as a piece of art."

According to Russell, comic art is more appreciated in Europe and Japan, but interest with comic art in the U.S. is increasing.

"People are becoming more familiar with animation cels, and how animation is put together," explained Russell, "and animation cels seem to be a hot property of late. There are also a number of comic book items that have moved into the mass market. Maus [by Art Spiegelman] made the leap from comics to mass bookseller. Understanding Comics [by Scott McCloud, published by Tundra] is also doing a similar thing. Marvel and DC products have moved into Waldenbooks and other similar stores. People are becoming more aware and more used to seeing the comic book art form in what would be a more traditional literature arena."

Nevertheless, Russell believes it will be a long time until comics in America have as revered a position as they do in Europe and Japan.

"I think it's going to be a long term thing," Russell said. "I don't think it's going to happen in the foreseeable future, but certainly in our small way, people are very receptive to it. People leaving the museum have been convinced. We're very fortunate. We have a wonderful building to work out of [and] we have a wonderful collection of work to show."

On permanent display in the museum is Eastman's collection of over 7,000 pieces of original art on loan.

"When you combine the best with the best," said Russell, "you'll be able to convince some people. Obviously, there's no way you can convince people with a lousy piece of artwork."

The main focus of the museum is to present material from the 70s, 80s and 90s, not only because that's where the largest part of the collection comes from, but also to differentiate it from The

Museum of Cartoon Art (that will eventually open in Florida), which concentrates on comic strip art and comic book art from the Golden and Silver Age.

When the museum first opened, it didn't garner a great deal of publicity or interest inside the industry.

"The museum went up without a lot of people knowing about it," remembered Russell, "partly because Kevin Eastman founded the initial setting up of the museum so we weren't going out to industry people asking for money. We did call on a number of creators in the industry for input. Subsequent to our being set up, our reaction from the industry has been positive. People have felt what we're doing is a good thing. They like the museum."

On the down side, Russell found there were degrees of trepidation because the museum is associated with Eastman, who is also affiliated with Kitchen Sink/Tundra and Mirage Publishing.

"We haven't had the support from within the industry that I would have liked to have seen," Russell explained. "We haven't been here very long. It takes a little bit of time to establish that you're a separate company, that this is not Kevin Eastman doing his thing. There's a purpose that's good for the entire industry and not just for Kevin Eastman."

Time For the Tour

The visitor to the Words & Pictures Museum enters through a maze. The first hallway is actually a cave, historically recreating the origin of graphic arts. As described by a Words & Pictures press release, "Primitive figures and bison are the logical precursor to the hieroglyphics with an introduction to the early artist, the 1500 years of graphic narrative [the use of words and pictures to tell a story] and the graffiti passage that ends the entering hall, ushering in the modern age of comics. Words and Pictures Museum literally guides the visitor from the Paleolithic to the Futuristic, with hundreds of graphic stops in between."

Though the artwork is presented in a fine art setting, the galleries in the museum are peppered with fun exhibits. For instance, there is a life size artist's studio.

"The artist's studio," Russell said, "started out simply as we wanted to show the tools the artist uses, as well as where he gets his ideas from. If you go into an artist's studio, you'll find that there are a lot of tools around, but there are also a lot of reference books [including] encyclopedias or photographic reference books. The unique thing about comic artists is that they don't just draw human beings, scenery [or] landscapes; they have to be able to draw buildings, cars, people [and] places. We wanted to show that. What we did was we took everything – we wanted to have as much fun as possible – and we built everything with a 'forced perspective,' meaning the things at the bottom were thicker than the things at the top. We glued everything to a wall, turned it on its side and inverted it 90 degrees so that it sticks off the wall at you, and put a six foot by eight foot plexiglass window in front of it that appears to be a skylight. It looks like you're looking down at the studio - a bird's eye view. That was fun, not to mention that we spent a fortune on Super Glue."

Central Interactive Area of the Words and Pictures Museum

"Everyone that worked on the project," Russell added, "kind of 'signed' it. We have mimeographed copies of some of the construction worker's birth certificates."

The museum also accommodates a central interactive area, designed for kids, where they enter a comic book environment and are encouraged to create their own stories.

"The interactive area is built to look like an outdoor plaza," Russell said. "It appears to look comic book like. Everything is a little askew. It's as though you've stepped across the pages of a comic. In that area, there are touch screen computers where kids are encouraged to create their own comics, large magnetic jigsaw puzzles that are six foot tall that kids are encouraged to put together, chalkboards that are set up with comic panels and all sorts of different things including books kids are encouraged to read."

On Exhibit

So far, special exhibits at the Words & Pictures Museum have included: a Simon Bisley show featuring work from Judgement On Gotham, the Batman/Judge Dredd crossover published by DC and Fleetway, Slaine, from Fleetway, the upcoming Melting Pot with script by Eastman, and Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles III, the movie.

Currently running through October 2, the Words & Pictures Museum is presenting Out of Space featuring Aliens from Twentieth Century Fox. The show will present work from Dark Horse's Aliens: Tribes written by Steve Bissette and painted by Dave Dorman, and also features work by Bisley, Mark A. Nelson and Mark Verheiden. In addition, the show will feature props from the movies such as an 8 foot tall Alien model and limited edition toy and model lines alongside unseen manuscripts.

"Immediately after the Aliens show," revealed Russell, "we have a Swamp Thing exhibit. We have a number of John Totleben's covers – [large oversize] oils that he did. We're actually showing part of Swamp Thing #88 [Rick Veitch was writer and artist], the culmination of a series of stories where Swamp Thing met Jesus Christ which DC refused to publish. We have work by all the Swamp Thing creators. That'll be on display for eight weeks."

"Then opening in the beginning of December," continued Russell, "is a show called Jurassic Art, which features dinosaurs. We have work from Bill Stout, Mark Schultz and Phil Yeh for the young kids."

Later, during spring time, Words & Pictures will be working in tandem with The Museum of Cartoon Art to present a Harvey Kurtzman retrospective dedicated to the cartoonist who was not only highly influential to the underground comics in the 1960s and the current "new wave" comics, but also the creator of Mad Magazine. Also being planned for the museum are roundtable discussions, one of which is a discussion and slideshow on horror comics by artist Steve Bissette.

For further information on the museum and upcoming exhibits, call or write to: The Words & Pictures Museum, 244 Main Street, The Roundhouse, Northampton, Ma. 01060, (413) 586-8545.

Legend:

The Magnificent Seven

by Neil Hansen

Assembled from the four corners of the United States and England are seven of the top creators in comics: John Byrne, Frank Miller, Dave Gibbons, Mike Mignola, Geoff Darrow, Paul Chadwick and Art Adams. These seven industry legends have created a roundtable under the aptly titled heading Legend.

On their quest for creating quality comics, the "magnificent seven" have decided to ride the reins of Dark Horse.

"It's not a company," said John Dennett, Dark Horse publicity coordinator. "It's not an imprint. It's a private club for these seven guys because they all admire and respect each other."

The question remains: How was this private club formed? Legendary comic book writer/artist John Byrne revealed the origin of Legend.

"Some of us – Frank Miller and Paul Chadwick – wanted to get together and do something," said Byrne. "It went through various incarnations until finally Frank and I said, 'The only way this is going to work is if we claim ourselves ultimate dictators and this is what it is.'"

"John Byrne and I appointed ourselves dictators," confirmed Frank Miller, acclaimed for his work on Marvel's Daredevil, DC's Batman: The Dark Knight Returns and Sin City for Dark Horse.

The dictators set their sights on Dark Horse.

"It's a happy relationship," said Dennett. "These are consummate professionals. This is more logical than the Image syndrome. You don't have to go completely renegade. Their job is 100% creativity. We're hired to handle the rest."

The "rest" includes marketing, production, promotion and advertising in contrast to Image where the creators have to be concerned not only about the creative work, but also the day-to-day duties of operating the business.

"We're not going to relive the Image explosion," Dennett reflected.

Legend will also not expand beyond their core creators for at least two years which also contrasts Image where people beyond the original founders (Rob Liefeld, Todd McFarlane, Mark Silvestri, Jim Lee and Erik Larson) were added to insure that some Image books would be guaranteed on-time delivery because many of the regular books weren't coming out on time. Unfortunately, some of the additions like Mike Grell and Larry Stroman didn't work out,and were either let go or on their way out.

"The seven people who are currently involved," Byrne said, "are self starters and are all complete units. For example, if Alan Moore walked in with a project, he would also have to walk in with an artist, whereas if Frank Miller walked in with a project, he has the artist already with him. All of us are writer/artists and that literally is the key. That's what closed the door for us. When we got Chadwick, we were really pleased."

"We created Legend to create a certain point of view," Miller added, "and we intend to keep it small."

According to Byrne, Legend is a pledge of quality to its readers.

"Dell [Comics back in the 1950s and 1960s] used to have its comics code," Byrne remembered, "[on its inside cover] with Dell's pledge to parents. Our [pledge] is quality to the reader."

Regarding the current state of the industry where there are so many comics companies, Byrne commented, "I am seriously worried about the future of the comics industry. I suspect there has to be some kind of implosion, and the big question is: Is it going to be a rapid implosion or a slow one, and who is going to be killed by it? That's one of the reasons for Legend because it's our pledge to the readers. It's saying, 'Hey, this is good stuff! We guarantee you good stuff!' If you are suddenly throwing your hands saying, 'I'm not going to buy every single issue of every single thing that comes out, I'm only going to buy good stuff.' then seeing our little Easter head on the cover is a fairly good guarantee that you will get good stuff."

Danger Unlimited ™&© 1993 John Byrne

Sin City ™&© 1993 Frank Miller

Legend's material, all creator-owned, will not only be comprised of comics already being published by Dark Horse like Next Men, Sin City and Paul Chadwick's critically lauded Concrete, but also new Legend titles yet to be seen.

"I have Next Men, which will be the first title to come out under the Legend imprint with issue #19," said Byrne. "Then early in January, I will have a whole new book which is a part of this whole Hellboy/Monkeyman and O'Brien universe which Mike (Mignola), Art Adams and I will be putting together in a title called Danger Unlimited that will be a totally separate entity from Next Men."

"It's everything the Next Men isn't," said Byrne of Danger Unlimited. "I've been having fun doing the sort of adult realistic approach I'm doing on Next Men. With Danger Unlimited, I'm going totally off the wall with this. It's going to [be] cosmic. It's going to be wall-to-wall superheroes. I'm retro-fitting so that there are Golden Age characters and Silver Age characters who will introduce some sort of history. Whereas Next Men was a universe that began the moment we say it, Danger Unlimited is a universe that already has a history, and the fun of that will be learning the history as we go along."

"In, many respects," Byrne continued, "it's very sort of Lee/Kirby. It's a team. It's super powers. Certainly, I would not be insulted to have anyone say that it is reminiscent of The Fantastic Four or especially [DC's] Challengers of the Unknown."

Byrne's plan is to have Hellboy, Monkeyman and O'Brien and Danger Unlimited to start off as their own entities existing in the same universe.

"We're going to be playing it very much like the early Marvel," Byrne illuminated, "where everybody is in the same universe but not constantly jumping into each other. As an example, I have created, for lack of a better term, a 'Captain America' character for background in Danger Unlimited called The Torch of Liberty. He has a fairly prominent part in Hellboy's origin, so right away the books are connected without sliming into each other. I think that this will be a lot of fun. We're really excited about that notion that it will feel a lot like Marvel did around 1964, 1965, 1966, that kind of range."

Both Hellboy and Monkeyman and O'Brien will appear in the same eight issue mini-series with the first four issues leading off with Hellboy and backed up by Monkeyman and O'Brien. The reverse will occur in the following four issues with Monkeyman and O'Brien taking the lead.

Hellboy is, according to John Dennett, "the world's most unusual paranormal investigator." This bizarre demon creature's adventures are expected to be tongue-in-cheek with plot and artwork by Mike Mignola (Bram Stoker's Dracula by Topps) with Byrne contributing the initial dialogue for the first few issues. On the other hand, Monkeyman & O'Brien relate the escapades of an intelligent gorilla and his beautiful, yet Amazonian partner created, written and drawn by Art Adams (Creature From The Black Lagoon from Dark Horse).

On Legend, Byrne applies his "back to basics" formula that has ensured him his success with the Fantastic Four and Superman.

"I've always gone backward to go forward," explained Byrne, "Traditionally, my approach has been to go 'back to the basics' with any book

The Big Guy & Rusty the Boy Robot
™&© 1993 Frank Miller & Geofrey Darrow

Martha Washington Goes to War ™&© 1993 Frank Miller and Dave Gibbons

I've ever done so here I'm going back to the basics with a book that's never existed before. It's a case of picking what 'basics' I want to have as the 'basics' of that particular title, but we'll see. We've got people who really love the old Marvel stuff, and it's important to emphasize that's a little pocket in Legend. Frank [Miller] is still off doing his stuff, and he's got three books which as far as I know aren't connected together. Of course, there's Paul Chadwick with Concrete."

Chadwick is preparing short stories for Dark Horse Presents to kick off a future mini-series while Frank Miller is working on three new titles. The first is a second Sin City six issue mini-series called Sin City: A Dame To Kill For. Miller said the story focuses on Dwight, "a man with a frustrated past [who] is dragged by the woman who has ruined his life." The events take place before the first Sin City, a serial in Dark Horse Presents. Sin City is a corrupt, crime infested, film noire town. The original serial centered on Violent Marv struggling with the corruption within the city. He died at the end of the storyline. In this new series, Marv's presence serves to uncover past events and his significance in the city's future. He will cross Dwight's path as an important background character. Miller handles both art and story in the new mini-series.

Secondly, Martha Washington Goes to War is the Miller/Dave Gibbons sequel to the critically acclaimed Give Me Liberty, tracking the further adventures of Martha Washington during the second Civil War.

"It takes place two years after Give Me Liberty," said Miller. "Martha, once again, is played against a colossal background."

Mike Mignola's Hellboy ™&© 1993 Micheal Mignola

Then, Miller goes the lighter route with a new series called The Big Guy and Rusty the Robot with Hard-Boiled collaborator Geoff Darrow.

"We were interested in a different direction," said Miller. "I always wanted to write something for kids' adventure stories. I want to write for kids, but I don't want to be condescending."

"The Big Guy is a giant retroactive looking robot," added Dennett, "while Rusty is a cute Astro Boy type of character."

However, beyond the three interconnected Byrne/Adams/Mignola books there will be no big universe crossovers between titles like Sin City and Next Men.

"Nobody is setting foot in Sin City except me," said Miller.

Nevertheless, despite the Legend hoopla, there is a great deal of product bursting out from so many companies. The Legend roundtable is justifiably concerned that material with quality may be overlooked for flashy chromium covers, polybagging and other enhancements.

"We have this speculator or sports card mentality," Byrne continued, "taking over the industry for the last couple of years. That, to me, is ridiculous. Could you imagine that taking over with paperback books? It's crazy. It's not the way things work. Comics to me are supposed to be a transitory experience. You're supposed to buy them, read them a couple of hundred times until they fall apart then they go into your memory, and in your memory, they get better. You pull out the old books and go, 'Oh, man. This isn't as good as I thought it was.' The worst things that plastic bags did was they made sure the books survive. You can pull them out over five years, and go, 'Boy, this wasn't really brilliant, was it?'"

"What disturbed me was the herd mentality," Miller said. "Speculators moved in and I felt out of place. John Byrne and all these guys felt the same thing. What we're trying to do is diversify our entertainment. What we're doing is putting our cards out on the table."

"We've had a false expansion," proceeded Miller. "The main way to expand is through the writers and artists. If we want people to expand into comics, we have to expand the material."

As a result, Legend is staying away from enhancements they feel are unfair to the collector.

"Dark Horse has suggested," said Byrne, "we might want to do special collectors editions. My argument has been: 'Okay, I don't mind doing that material, provided that we produce the regular packet as it has always been.' I don't want to betray the people who have been buying my stuff up to now by suddenly saying, 'Well, thanks for buying Next Men, if you want to buy the next issue, you have to pay $25 for it.' I've told Dark Horse if they can come up with some way to produce a package that will appeal to the speculator, but will not offend the serious collector, that's okay by me. Frankly, I can't conceive of any way to do it because all you're going to do is say, 'Ooops, that's two books you have to buy.'"

Finally to sum it all up, Miller echoed the sentiments of all the people involved with Legend and their love of the art form.

"Bottom line for me," Miller concluded, "is that getting up in the morning and getting to it is a lot of fun. It's an [art] form with a lot of personality. You can draw and write the whole thing."

BACK ISSUE BITS

by Neil Hansen & Kevin Ohlandt

Unfortunately, the current "summer of glut" (mentioned last issue) is still causing a downward spiral of interest with regards to back issues. This trend is primarily due to the flood of new releases on the market, and the wait on titles soon to arrive at comics shops and newsstands.

For example, Valiant titles are suffering from the same disease that afflicted the sports card industry years ago. Back then, speculators, from retailers to customers of all ages, would invest in the card market for a short term quick fix investment by buying cases of cards, wait for a slight price raise and then dump them onto the market for slightly above cost, making a 10 to 15% profit. Ever since the popularity of Valiant's Harbinger #1 (which had a low print run), and their initial creation of variant limited special editions of regular comics (a gold Archer & Armstrong #0, for example), speculators followed the same lead with Valiant's comics as they had with sports cards. However, when it was realized that there were more than enough copies to go around, prices began to plummet. This resulted in dealers not being able to sell more product, and speculators anticipating a big return on their investment. Dealers order lower comics, and the speculative customers are inadvertently turned off to comics. Despite the negative connotations, the reality is that more readers will be able to afford issues and have an option to buy on content as opposed to investment. In addition, upon stabilization of prices, the dealers can sell and resell at a more affordable price to the consumer. The speculator process also does not take into account the quality or lack thereof with the comics.

Bone ™&© 1993 Jeff Smith

A spokesman from RTS Unlimited, in Golden, Colorado said, "A crash is imminent, it will get rid of the speculators and give comics back to the readers."

Hoping the above situation will occur, a retailer from Grey's Comics and Cards in Lake Oswago, Oregon said the industry "needs an enema to wash the garbage out of the system."

Overprinting of new comics has also led to a decrease in back issue sales. The most recent example of this is the "Reign of the Supermen" in the Superman titles. As a result of the overprinting, these comics can usually be found at cover price. This is similar to what happened to X-Men #1, which came out two years ago with five cover variations. With over seven million copies out there, it is highly unlikely that the books will ever really move.

Another reason for slow movement is a general dissatisfaction with the creators behind a title, lackluster storylines and substandard art helping to contribute to the lack of interest in an otherwise popular character. Additional causes for slow movement include lateness of new product and the vast numbers of different titles as well.

With All this Gloom and Doom, What's Moving Forward?

There seems to be a resurgence of interest in some black & white publisher titles with Jeff Smith's Bone leading the pack. Apparently, the first printing contained only 3,000 copies. Fans are scrambling for this issue which some claim may be the next Cerebus or Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles. Other black & white comics in demand include James Owen's Starchild, Colleen Doran's A Distant Soil and Fantagraphics' Eightball and Hate. All are experiencing an increase in readership and back issues are extremely hard to find.

Daredevil is also hot. With the new storyline, Elektra appearances have started to escalate in demand with the anticipation of her return to the Marvel Universe. Daredevil #168, 174, 175, 179-181 and 190 and Elektra: Assassin #1-8 are being picked up again after years of sitting on shelves. Iron Fist #14, with the first appearance of Sabretooth is extremely popular right now due to his future induction into the X-Men. That, combined with his recent mini-series, is starting a trend that Incredible Hulk #181 and Amazing Spider-Man #129 went through during the 1980s.

From DC, the return of Superman in Superman #82 has scored high with retailers. Adventures of Superman #466 and 468 with the first appearances of Hank Henshaw who became the evil Cyborg Superman are difficult to acquire. Peripherally, Green Lantern #46, with Hal Jordan battling Mongul which dovetails into the "Reign of the Supermen" storyline was underordered. Subsequently, prices on this book are expected to increase. The new psychological adult themes of Jonah Hex a la Vertigo in Jonah Hex: Two-Gun Mojo caused a sellout of the first two issues in many areas, rekindling interest in All-Star Western #10 and Jonah Hex #1-92. In addition, new interest on the current Flash(Wally West) has caused demand on his first appearance as Kid Flash in Flash (first series) #110.

Finally, in spite of the downward spiral of Valiant's current crop of books, X-O Manowar is bucking the hurricane with issues continually disappearing off the comics racks with prices of back issues staying at the same level.

COMICS VALUES MONTHLY SAN DIEGO POLL

Comics Values Monthly recently polled a number of selected retailers at the 1993 San Diego Comic Convention Trade Expo about the current status of sales and trends in the comic book industry. The poll results are as follows:

1) According to dealers polled, 60% said both Image and Valiant have slowed down in their stores, 16% said only Image has slowed down, 4% said only Valiant slowed down, and 20% showed no decrease in sales.

2) After the highly publicized Death of Superman story, 84% of the retailers indicated more new non-comic book readers entered their shops, and 90% of those new customers have stayed on after the storyline ended.

3) 75% of the retailers polled felt that speculators were not abandoning the comic book industry.

4) With regards to enhanced covers, 54% of the retailers polled still gain increased sales due to gimmick covers, 34% showed decreasing sales and 9% indicated no difference in sales.

5) Polybagged comics had an even split according to the retailers polled. 50% reported an increase in sales,while the other 50% saw a decrease in sales. However, 67% of those polled felt polybagged comics and the same copies pulled out of the polybag should not be priced differently.

6) Lateness in product affected 91% of stores with a decrease in sales. The other 9% felt it had no impact on sales.

7) Finally, the amount of product out this summer has affected the back issue sales market. 58% reported profits in their stores while 42% said they had a decrease. Of both groups, 92% showed the amount of new product decreasing the amount of back issues bought.
